JO PACKHAM

Three accomplished women, three published authors, three celebrated chefs ... and that is where the similarities end. These women could not be more different in who they are, what they love, and the ingredients of their lives and accomplishments.

I have read their stories, eaten their food, bought their books, and am fascinated by their differences. I could go on for pages about their lives, their favorite foods, and all of the details that make them who they are ... but you simply need to go and buy their books and discover their worlds on your own. You will undoubtedly learn "secrets" that I don't know, try a variety of foods that I have not yet cooked or tasted, and explore a portion of their journeys that I have yet to travel.

Remember ... the journey is the destination, and these three women can take you to places you cannot go alone.
